You want him to visit next week, yes? I'd like to get that finalized tomorrow. Have him fly in the night before, meet you for breakfast, then meet some combination of you, bob sussman, marygrace, bettina, nancy sutley and anyone else? He'd then fly back on a 5ish pm flight?

Federal and state regulators hope a "good-faith offer" from Dow Chemical Co. will trigger a long-sought cleanup of dioxin pollution along a 50-mile swath of waterways and floodplains in central Michigan. . . "It's a delaying tactic at a minimum and an unnecessary one," Mary Gade told The Associated Press. She says her aggressiveness in confronting Dow was the reason she was fired last May. . . Gade, now a Chicago-area consultant, said in a phone interview the Superfund Alternative Site framework has less teeth than the hazardous waste law. Switching from one regulatory scheme to another is "highly unusual" and seems likely to require a restart of many tasks, she said. . . Gade, who grilled former EPA colleagues at a public meeting in Saginaw last month, continues following the case she says cost her her job. "It's important to me that the spotlight continues to be put on the situation so people don't forget about it or allow it to be shoved under the carpet," she said.

Hi Marcus,

I hope your trip went well. I need you to start calling your vetting folks to try to get them to focus on you. These days the WH personnel system is pretty backed up and the squeaky wheel gets the grease.

Tell them that my travel schedule picks up significantly over the next 10 days (it really does!) And I've told you I need you to start at EPA ASAP. We are also pushing on our end.

Environment:

The package includes $9.2 billion for environmental projects at the Interior Department and the Environmental Protection Agency. The money would be used to shutter abandoned mines on public lands, to help local governments protect drinking water supplies, and to erect energy-efficient visitor centers at wildlife refuges and national parks.

02/14/2009 10:56 PM

The Interior Department estimates that its portion of the work would generate about 100,000 jobs over the next two years.

Yet the plan will only make a dent in the backlog of cleanups facing the EPA and the long list of chores at the country's national parks, refuges and other public lands. It would be more like a down payment.

When it comes to national parks, the plan sets aside $735 million for road repairs and maintenance. But that's a fraction of the $9 billion worth of work waiting for funding.

At EPA, the payout is $7.2 billion. The bulk of the money will help local communities and states repair and improve drinking water systems and fund projects that protect bays, rivers and other waterways used as sources of drinking water.

The rest of EPA's cut — $800 million — will be used to clean up leaky gasoline storage tanks and the nation's hazardous waste sites.

Subject: Stimulus Steering Committee Follow-up

Stimulus Steering Committee Members,

Thank you for your strong participation in yesterday's stimulus steering committee meeting. I believe we made a great deal of progress in identifying some of the major challenges we will confront as well as reaching agreement on a subcommittee structure that will provide additional support to this effort.

To keep everyone current, the following subcommittees have been formed and leaders have been identified:

Communications and Outreach: Mike Thiem / OPA
Budget and Resources Maryann Froehlich / OCFO

Contracts: Chuck Gherardini / OARM
Grants and IA's Howard Corcoran / OARM

Tracking and Reporting systems: Mike Flynn / OEI Inter - Agency Issues (e.g. NEPA) OECA (tbd)

We will also need a group to focus on metrics and measures but I think we have a little time to form that group.

I would hope that the subcommittees will get to work right away and as a first step in helping them set up, it would be helpful if you could alert the leads to any existing groups that should be brought under their umbrella or with whom they should at a minimum, coordinate. We will look to the subcommittee leads to come to our Thursday meetings to report out on progress and issues.

Thanks again and I hope everyone has a great weekend.

Susie
